DESIDENCES FOR RENT.

All these cities I found remarkably clean. The cause of this is, that they are very thoroughly paved, and very thoroughly sewered. The paring is done almost entirely with the granite blocks, similar to those now largely used in Philadelphia. Some of the back streets are Micadamized, but this kind of paving has been done in so perfect a manner as to make these streets as solid almost as the solid stone tissell. The sewers are very zenerally than helps to the acquirement of a good common school education; that tend not only to fritter away the time of scholars but likewise increase the cost of the system and thus make it unpopular with a large body of its supporters.

Two points connected with the school system are now receiving particular at tention in the discussions of the press, viz: the study of German and the establishment of High Schools. The question is being asked, what has the Common School system to do with the study of German, or of Latio, or of higher mathematics? Life is short; the school life of the masses is very short; and why seek to enlarge the legitimate curriculum of an elementary education withstudies thatdo not belong to it, to the detriment of the system and to the dissatisfaction of the system and to the dissatisfaction of the system are question that is being prosystem are now receiving particular st-

This is the question that is being propounded and discussed, and it is a very ggestive and important one, and, so far as we observe, the best pens engaged The ia the discussion declars for the public school system, pure and simple, disuch as certain specialists and overzealous schoolmen, out of a species of hobbyism that belongs to those who have zeal without real knowledge, have cussion, and especially the turn that it is is an Alderman of the city, honored with taking, and we trust the day is at hand Sawana Works Committee to visit the when the public mind will settle down firmly, as near as may be, to the original ground-work of the Common School system. It is not more education in the Public Schools that we need, but better education; not an increase of quantity but of quality. We need schoolmen who are ambitious and zealous for proficiency, and, for 'hat matter, for profundity in the old time "three Rs," ("readin, 'ritin and 'rithmetic") rather than for the new fangled addends that now, in so many instances, simply confuse and antagonize everything like thoroughness in the action of the confusion of the set of the s

It would be an interesting can go to the black board and spell and be dietated to them. How many can really read naturally? That is, read in secondance with the old rule that the inflections of the human voice in reading should be so nearly conversational in their tone as almost to defy detection in an adjoining examination in the cesential principles amples to which they have been accus tomed? apprehend that the experience of intelligent and accurate observers would return answers not very creditable to our Common School system.

No doubt many people look with indifference on the spectacle of children passing from room to room through the common schools in a state of mental bewilderment, but it is, nevertheless, to the eye of any person properly aware of the cyto farth of the cyto f grievous wrong that is thereby done to children, a very said spectacle. No intelligent parent who is himself or herself deducating one or two children would put them forward in any such a way. The true way to educate children collectively is to approximate as near as possible to the thorough education that would be given to a single scholar by a single well qualified teacher. The most of children need a great deal more of patient and axhaustive attention, explanation and repetition than they get in the schools. It is impossible for them to get such attention as is suitable to their respective capacities, but nevertheless the perfection and the labor of the Communication and mure close, containing the Pannure lose, containing the Pa tention as is suitable to their respective capacities, but nevertheless the perfection, and the glory of the Common School System should be in attaining as near as possible to the individual standard. This approximate attainment can never be reached save by keeping the Common School System severely down to its original scope and purpose, and protecting it against the quackery of those who would magnify themselves or their office at the expense of the masses who are so vitally interested in thorough elementary education.

Cumbriant News of Monday.

It is feared that very great damage is done to the canal along its entire length, and that breaks are numerous and of a serious nature. A prominent canal man is of the opinion that the whole of the "berm bank" (the bank on the left hand side going east) is more or less injured or destroyed from Sir John's Run to Georgetown! At all events it is certain that canal business will of necessity be totally suspended for the present season.

It is estimated that there are over two hundred boats, laden with coal, at vathe salary is a snug round sum.

The sewer openings here all seem to be trapped, and I notice that the catich basins are made the receptacles for all kinds of fillth. I am inclined to think that my views on the question of trapping sewers have undergone some modification since I have observed the practical working of traps. They may be occasionally a necessity, but as a vule I am inclined to regard numerous guiter openings into the sewers, with iron grates, as preferable. This is a question which needs some attention just now in Wheeling. Something should be done to remove the dreadful offensiveness of the sewer openings in summer. I hope the committee, with the valuable assistance of Dr. Ward, may effect a remedy before my return.

I am hard at work endeavoring to im-

MR. HENRY WATTERSON was dired and wined by the Lotus Clubin New York after his recent lecture there. He made a post-prandial speech of which the following is a specimen:

In my part of the country we have an impression that the Government should give us what money we want and ask no questions. During the flush times of '37, an old North Georgia farmer went down to Augusta, entered the State Bank, and aid to the Cashier: "Bob we must have more circulatin medium, bound to have lit can't get on without it." "Well says the Cashier, "how are you going to get it?" "Why stomp it." "Suppose we stomp it, as you say, how are we to redeem it?" "Why, Bob, this is what I am a comin' to. You see, in North Georgy we are ogin reasonption." It seems to me that the story illustrates the financial situation in Washinglon at least,

The city of Burnley, where most of my time in England was spent, has a population of 50,000. The sewage of the city amounts to one million gallons a day, which until recently was carried about three miles to be emptied into a small river, or creek as it would be called in America. A gentiteman living on its banks went into court and sued out an injuction restraining the city from any longer conveying the sewage water into this stream. The City Council thereupon proceeded to the crection of "Sewage Works." I was, through the influence of my cousin, who

which I do the great deal, a honcest large reservoirs of water, formed simply by throwing a dam across a deep ravine. These were quite numerous, and I was informed they were for the purpose of supplying the towns with water. The rain fall in England is very large, and water is an article always to be had on demand. To the naked eye the water in these reservoirs was of crystal purity. A part of the water supply of Liverpool is conveyed in pipes, through a succession of reservoirs, a distance of at least twenty-tive miles. Although this water is beautiful to look at, and perfectly pure so far as I know, I confess to a preference for Wheeling water over any I have tasted since leaving home, even though it be quite frequently contaminated with mud. The water supply of this city is derived from Portland Hills, about six miles away. Here a number of reservoirs are built, the water purified by some system of filtering, and conveyed to the city in pipes. It is very palatable and the supply abundant. The delivery in the city is at the rate of about six thousand five hundred gallons per minute, which would allow each person in the city-popula-	8, & O. R. B.
